Chapter 1 by James Nilsson_19

Calm and bright. The morning sun just peaked above the trees through my bedroom window. I took a sip of water, made my way out of bed and got dressed. I headed downstairs and out to the mailbox and there it was. a 2 foot tall 3 foot long and 2 foot wide cardboard box labelled "Toaster". I had been waiting anxiously for its arrival and there it was, I brought it inside and tore open the packaging to discover a large and shiny, maroon toaster with all kinds of dials and buttons on its side and front 4 slots on the top for inserting toast, and a power chord all assembled neatly in Styrofoam. It was the worlds first ever artificially intelligent toaster.
